

Project Monitoring and Evaluation

Overview

Project Monitoring and Evaluation (M&E) is among the key issues for successful project management. In the world where almost everything done is a project, M&E cannot be overemphasized. It is often a requirement by project designs and even by funding organizations. Monitoring is very essential to ensure that a project is on track. On the other hand evaluation is key in knowing whether we have been doing what was expected of us in the project. Mid-term evaluation/review provides lessons for remaining part of project. End of project evaluation provides lessons for the project in question and future similar projects and projects in similar environment.

This course offers an unprecedented opportunity for all project stakeholders to step up, acquire new knowledge and skills on M&E based on hands-on experience in over 15 projects. Innovative project M&E including use of documentaries will be taught with examples. It is a course not to be missed.
